THE MOON IS DOWN

In 2017, HERC begins its third movie series asking the question, "What did Americans know about the racism and horrors of the NAZI threat before and during WWII?" We'll continue to explore what has become quite obvious to our filmgoers – that what Americans knew about the discriminatory policies of the Nazis, the denial of free speech and religion, and the existence of brutal concentration camps inside Germany was quite extensive.

- The Moon is Down, starring Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Henry Travers (aka Clarence in It's a Wonderful Life) was released by 20th Century Fox in 1943. Based on a John Steinbeck novel, it tells a story of Nazi occupation of a resource rich village in Norway. While the Nazis expected capitulation, the townspeople, led by their dignified, compassionate mayor, resist and experience brutal retaliation. It is a story of people whose will and nobility cannot be broken by violence. It also depicts a conflict of ideologies.
